Foothills Grad Shines in the Spotlight

What would you do if American chef Guy Fieri stopped by your restaurant to critique your cooking? If you are Luis Manuel Campos '14, you would serve up some Seca de Carne con Frejoles, beef braised in cilantro and Peruvian sauce, and Lomas Saltado. His family's Inca's Peruvian Cuisine has become a well-known purveyor of Peru in Tucson, or as Guy Fieri would say, "A first class ticket to Flavortown!" This month, Fieri featured Inca's in the "Pizza, Pork and Peru" episode of his show "Diners, Drive-Ins and Dives."

In addition to running Inca's, Luis studies Computer Science at the University of Arizona and he is a longtime volunteer with Amigos de las Americas.

Foothills Grad Raises Awareness for Homeless Women's Health Needs

Through her organization The Outpatient Project, Foothills grad Sruti Bandlamuri '17 is raising awareness for the important work that Sister Jose Women's Center, a local nonprofit shelter, is doing for homeless women in the Tucson community.

Sruti's work culminated in creating a brief documentary titled TucsonPERIOD, The Outpatient Project's menstrual product drive for Tucson's homeless, which led to the donation of over 1,100 menstrual products (enough to provide approximately 41 women with pads, tampons, and hygiene wipes for the month) to Sister Jose Women's Center. Mobile Medicats distributed the remaining 300 menstrual products to homeless individuals on the streets of Tucson.

Sruti has a long history of helping others. She founded The Outpatient Project with her friends while they were still students at CFHS. Using storytelling, they sought to make health care issues relatable and easily understood by all. Visit their website at <http://theoutpatient.org/>
